Public Unstinted In Its Praise of Panama Canal Number of Star-Bulletin

The most cordial praise of the Star-Bulletin's Hawaii-Panama edition and appreciation of the purpose for which it was issued have been voiced ever since the special, handsomely-printed supplement appeared yesterday afternoon.

It is generally declared to be the finest specimen of the printer's art ever issued in Hawaii, and from an industrial and a promotion standpoint it has "hit the mark" with Hawaii. "Home made" from cover to cover, it is an example of home industry as well as a comprehensive pictorial and news summary of Hawaii's varied activities and attractions.

Here are a few of the numberless comments that have been given to the Star-Bulletin, volunteered over the telephone, by letter or word of mouth:

W. C. Furer: It is a beautiful edition and I was especially struck with the fine color engravings.

E. W. Raphael: I want to congratulate the Star-Bulletin upon this splendid edition. It is one for Hawaii to be proud of and it should be sent all over the world.

L. R. Kilham: The Hawaii-Panama edition of the Star-Bulletin is a fine feature and very effective. It is good advertising for the territory in every way.

E. W. P. St. George: The Promotion Committee should see to it that every newspaper in the United States is supplied with a copy of the Star-Bulletin's special edition. That would be real promotion.

Geo. F. Renton: Your special edition is very attractive and a credit to your establishment.

L. A. Thwaites: The Star-Bulletin is certainly to be congratulated on the magnificent work in the special edition.

Chas. R. Frazier: It represents the biggest forward step ever made in the printing art in Hawaii. If every individual in this territory will send a copy abroad the result, from an advertising standpoint, will be stupendous.

M. Gooding Field: The Star-Bulletin special edition is a wonder. It is hard to believe that a local plant can afford to be equipped to turn out such elegant work.

C. A. Stoble: It is fine. I shall send some away to my friends in the states.

W. A. Bowen: I like the Star-Bulletin special edition very much indeed. James D. Dougherty: From the standpoint of the printer—the artistic—it is excellent.

Fred Turrill: Your supplement is the best promotion literature that has ever been published in these islands. I want to tell you so. And I was astonished to know that you did it all in your own office. I didn't know such work could be done here.

E. H. Paris: An excellent piece of promotion work. Very fine.

Sidney R. Jordan: The finest edition of its kind ever gotten out in Honolulu. Look at those cuts—simply magnificent. It is a Christmas present to itself.

Arthur F. Wall: A very creditable and beautiful number.

Emil A. Berndt: The edition is the last word in printing as far as Honolulu goes. I can hardly realize that the work was done in this city. The color work is something wonderful. It is a great credit to the Star-Bulletin plant, and is the best promotion literature we have. I am going to send a copy to all my mainland friends, as well as to the head of every branch store of this firm.

Augustus E. Murphy: A beautiful edition—a credit to the Star-Bulletin and to Hawaii.

Ed. Towse: I haven't seen a copy of the edition yet, but from what I hear of it, it is a wonder.

Oliver Lansing: I congratulate you on having issued the finest special for promotion ever gotten out in these islands.

James Bicknell: A beautiful piece of work, especially so in the illustrations with which it is so profusely decorated.

Rufus W. Robinson: Rich in illustrations which would be a credit to any printing establishment in the United States.

P. T. Phillips: I was surprised at the typographical appearance of the Hawaii-Panama special edition of the Star-Bulletin. I hope to be one of the first to carry a number of copies to Hilo.

W. H. C. Campbell: All districts in the territory were equally favored in the splendid promotion matter brought out in the Honolulu Star-Bulletin special.

J. W. Bains: There is the true ring of the promotionist found in the columns of the Star-Bulletin Panama special number. I was pleased to note that the island of Hawaii was well represented in pictorial as well as letter press.

John Detor: The Hawaii section is a credit to the islands. It is a great number and a real booster for our resources and attractions.

J. Walter Doyle: There is some class to that special edition. My friends in Australia will be delighted with it.

Roger Taylor: The resources of the islands were never shown to better advantage than in the pages of the Hawaii special edition gotten out by the Star-Bulletin.

Collector M. A. Franklin: The Hawaii-Panama edition of the Star-Bulletin will certainly be forwarded to my friends in the southern states. It's simply great. It tells more than I could set forth through a year's letter writing.

Governor Pinkham: It is an excellent work, worthy of Hawaii.

Judge C. W. Ashford: The Star-Bulletin's Hawaii-Panama supplement is a revelation of the remarkable advance in printing and newspaper work made in these islands in the last decade. The publication is the best thing of its kind I've seen prepared in Hawaii. The photographic and color work was especially surprising in its good quality. Altogether it should prove a real live promotion asset for the territory.

Harold Giffard: That supplement is a corker. I didn't think newspaper work in Hawaii had reached such a high state of development, particularly in printing and art work. One thing that especially interests me, of course is the picture of the scenes near my parents' home.

Judge J. L. Whitney: The Star-Bulletin's special edition seems to me to be as good as most of the publications of similar kind issued by the big concerns on the mainland.

Judge T. B. Stuart: I think the Star-Bulletin must have sprung a huge surprise on the people of the territory with that special edition supplement. Everyone knew something in the way of a special edition was forthcoming, but I doubt if few dreamed it would be anything so elaborate and really expensive. And the surprise certainly has been an agreeable one. I surmise it will astonish the people on the mainland who see it and learn that it is strictly the product of Hawaii, from cover to cover.

Col. C. J. McCarthy: The supplement is certain to open the eyes of our friends on the mainland, both by the great mass of information and fine art work it contains and by the way in which it has been handled. It looks more like the product of some big publishing house of Chicago or New York than an issue by a Honolulu daily newspaper.

D. L. Conkling: The Star-Bulletin's supplement reminds me of fifteen years ago in Hawaii, because it shows the newspaper business today is so different. The financial end of the thing must have been a tremendous proposition.

Mayer J. J. Fern: I have never been on the mainland and I don't know just how far big publication firms there can go in getting up this sort of thing, but I bet they can't beat this here Star-Bulletin supplement very much. I bet even money nothing better than that is done during my successor's term of office.

Chester Doyle: That Star-Bulletin supplement is a wonder in artistic color schemes. I am going to keep a copy on hand to study for suggestions for my neckties hereafter.

C. A. Cottrill: It's a glowing colorful tribute to the natural beauties of Hawaii. It comes the nearest of anything I've yet seen to give a true impression of the vivid colorings of our natural scenery.

J. M. Stainback: Do you mean to say that a strictly island product? It is hard to believe, the edition is so complete, so perfect in every way.

W. W. Thayer: I wish it were possible to have a big supply of that supplement on hand at the Hawaii Building during the exposition to distribute among tourists and visitors. I should like to see it spread broadcast throughout the United States.
